Once upon a time, there was a very docile dog. He and his owner got along very well and their daily ambles were very fascinating. The man was a stock broker, he went to work every day to trade his stocks. He was never married, and has no kids, because all he needs is his dog. So whenever he comes home from work, he gets in a jogging outfit, and goes for a walk with his dog. On their daily saunters, the man talks to the dog about his stock broking problems, and the dog always has a sullen look on his face when something bad happens. At the end of their walks, they always go to the vegetable stand to barter for dinner. The man trades the use of the dog for a day for tomatoes, potatoes, corn, and lettuce. One day, the man decided to take his dog for a extra long walk. The dog's thirst was unquenchable; he longed to take a sip of the puddles on the side of the road, but his owner was running at full speed, so he couldn't stop. Without wanting to admit it, the owner's throat was perched too. They finally ran to the vegetable stand, but it was closed for inventory. The owner made an oration the whole way home over dinner. The dog had no sign of sympathy on his face; he was giving the owner an impassive look, so the owner stopped his proclamation. They went home and had Spaghetti's for supper.

The End

The Iroquois make preparations for winter in many ways. Firstly, they have to store food for all of winter. They have to make new moccasins and snowshoes. They have to patch up holes in their clothing, to keep off the cold. They also have to patch holes in the roof and walls, to keep out the cold. These are some of the many ways the Iroquois make preparations for winter.

Oct. 10th, 2002 - Dialogue

Characters: Quetit, Nunscheach

① Quetitsaid "I wish we had more food, poor Woelfin is so very skinny!"

② "I understand your concern, Quetit. She can hardly walk," whispered Nunscheach.

47 ~~③~~ "If only Tskinnak could catch more fish," Quetit replied, "she got lucky last time."

④ "Should we try?" Nunscheach says anxiously. "Should we try to catch our own fish?"

④ "Tskinnak would be so proud!" states Quetit. "She would feed Woelfin and make her better!"

② "Let's go to the stream!" yells Nunscheach.

① Quetit replies, "I'm right behind you!"

I am an alien. I have just moved here from Romania, because I was exiled. This is my story.

I was an Romanian spy. I was planted in Brazil to spy for our leader, Xyplifnejo Hagendagen. At first it started out great. I mean, I was doing my job and loving it, but then I met Yolanda Jicfal. We fell in love, she was caring, she would solace me when I was sick of being a spy. She made me want to stay with her forever. So I was insidious to Romania and started working for Brazil. Yes, I know it was a fickle move, but I loved Yolanda. I wanted to stay with her. Somehow, Romania found out and accused me of treachery. They accused me of also being pliable. When I heard I was exiled, my face turned pallid. I was shocked / I was overwhelmed with grievance. As I retired from my work with Brazil, Yolanda was overwhelmed with a sickness, and died shortly after. At her funeral, the Romanian Squat team burst in and took me back to Romania. The whole ride home, I was glowered at. This is how I wound up in a Romanian prison, telling this story. The moral of this story is, never fall in love. It is blind.

There once was a woman on trial. She was accused of sarcasm to a public authority. She went to court, and all who saw her saw a woman who was ominous to the judge. She was an aversion to the jury, going on and on over her antagonism to the person of authority. She claimed she was aloof, savoring her food in the food court just like everyone else. When she dropped her fork, however, the security guard issued an admonition. She was filled with revulsion towards the security guard, who appeared stoic through her torment to him. Just when she was in despair, thinking she would get kicked out of the mall, she made a run for it. "This is so stupid!" she thought. "I have no place to hide!" She started to feel incredulity for fear that she would be discovered by that odious security guard. Then her story ended, leaving the judge with a story of one woman's torture. She was found ~~not guilty~~ innocent.

I walked into the party, so nervous in my mind. "What am I doing here?", she thinks. There are people dispersed around the room. I look around, and notice the embellished walls, gaudy armchairs, and inordinate amounts of paintings. She sees Karen, and rushes over. They whisper together about the "in" crowd party, seeing people dancing. Karen and her were compatible, being best friends forever. A boy comes up to Karen, taking her to the dancefloor. I set down next to Donne, afraid I girl, boking overwrought. I ask her what's wrong, and she whispers "my dog died". I start consoling her, while she says "they covered him with a pall this morning". I finish up with her, and decide I am venous. I get up to look at the food, and see Shelly and Bob the complement couple. I feel a stab of jealousy, and walk by. This was all so new to me, and I found indignantly to myself, and go to the food table. There was Joey, a real firebrand always ready to be Carrabaras. I've always admired him and he takes me to the dance floor.

I am ravenously hungry.

When Joey was being presumptuous he cooked dinner.

She was inordinately fond of yellow things.

v<sub>1</sub> I needed 14 more items to complement the grocery list.

To the untrained eye, the space shuttle Columbia was absolute. No one could have anticipated what happened sixteen minutes before its scheduled landing time, the Columbia dissipated into space. Some Atheists might disagree with my prediction, but I know that all 7 astronauts are now in the skies, and not in a shuttle. Most of the country is speculating why God would want this to happen. As the shuttle Columbia was traveling through the atmosphere, it seemed to be under seige from the tremendous heat and pressure that is in space. It is saturated in everyone's mind how much we lost Saturday.

When the spaceship blew apart, peices of the shuttle flew all over Texas, Alabama, and Georgia. Parts of the wing landed in someones coppice. Another woman found another part on a hillock behind her house. It is blasphemous that the astronauts are not with us today.

These days, most television programs are contemptuous. They hampers (V) education, and focus on violence. Some people are indifferent on this thought, including me, just because I enjoy some shows. Yet, most shows are junk. The producers tactfully plan out their shows to include Friends reconciling, people acting stealthily, and people meeting in dark alleys, who (V) rendezvous for breath-taking reasons. Everything meets adds up to the grand finale. It seems like a new reality TV show comes out every day!

Most of these shows make me squeamish, like Fear Factor. Who would stick their head in a bowl full of scorpions?

Some other shows follow stars around for the day, filming them being (V) covered around in a limo. They then will (V) rendezvous with friends at Chanel for a $30,000 shopping spree. They then go for a dive to some exotic place with a hampers (N) full of expensive food. All the while needing a conveyer (N) to protect them. All the while, their favorite rendezvous is their multi-million dollar homes. Most of these shows are rendezvous - m - pointless.

Vocabulary Story List Nine

All kinds of sports get people ecstatic. They go to great lengths to see their favorite team in action. The alacrity of the prayers is astounding. When you are in the stands, the clamor of other people is overwhelming. Overall, the amount of people who don't enjoy this feeling is scant.

Although sports are fun, there are many roles you have to be complacent with. The guards at the stands seem very haughty, if you ask me. They are doing their job though, which is to scant on the amount of overexcited fans.

Some sports that people go for are, football, soccer, baseball, softball, basketball, tennis, swimming, surfing, sailing, and rock climbing. This last sport is when you climb up rocks and their precipices. This is not a common sport. Some other unusual sports are, cribbage, diving, hiking, and horseback riding. In horseback riding, you ride a horse, sometimes using a quirt to control it.

For many years, there has been a chasm between sports. Each sport thinks higher of themselves. Yet, we all will make a clamor over sports until we are withered and old.
